Performance goal and investment strategy

An equity fund intended mainly for dynamic investors with a long-term investment horizon. The aim of the investment strategy is to provide investors a long-term return by investments in a concentrated portfolio of stocks issued by companies with lower market capitalisation (so-called small caps) listed on developed stock markets of Europe and North America. The objective is achieved by an active selection of individual stocks for a long-term return (so-called "stock picking"). The fund's portfolio usually represents at least forty different investment cases with approximately the same weight. One investment case usually means an investment in one selected stock and in some cases in more stocks. Given the significant representation of stocks in the portfolio and high concentration of the portfolio, the value of the investment may show high short-term volatility. In view of the investment strategy, the fund is suitable for regular investment and of being part of the equity component of the investment portfolio.
